BELIEVING as I do, that PROVIDENCE, at Fairfax Court-House, would be a suitable situation for mechanics of the above description, I offer to such, lots in that village for sale, on ground rent for ever—will build and furnish suitable houses and rent to them, or furnish brick to them to build with; and invite any who feel disposed to settle there, for the purpose of carrying on their respective trades to advantage, to come and view the situation. It is a very public place, the centre of the county, where the superior and county courts are held. The Little River Turnpike Road passes through this little town from Alexandria westward, and where all the public meetings for the county, &c. are held; and where trades of the aforesaid description being carried on, would meet with great encouragement, and be a public convenience to the country around. No situation can be more healthy—good water, and fire wood cheap. Mechanics of the above description must generally depend on the country people, farmers, &c. to be their customers. Here they would be in a convenient situation for all the purposes. I invite a call, and view for themselves. I would also furnish lots adjacent, from one to five acres each, for cultivation, pasture, &c. on moderate terms; all of which can be shown, and terms made known, on application to RICH'D. RATCLIFFE,

All masters of vessels are forewarned from harboring or taking into their employ said negro, under penalty of having the law rigidly enforced against them. For Sale or Lease,

THE following tracts of land in Charles county, Maryland: one lying on the Potomac, at the mouth of Pomonkey creek, containing three hundred and forty acres, about 16 miles from Alexandria, the larger portion level land, of a stiff soil, well adapted to the cultivation of corn, wheat and tobacco, and equal in fertility to any in the neighborhood. On this farm is one of the most elegant sites for building of all those fine heights which border the Potomac, commanding the most extensive view of the adjacent country, both in Virginia and Maryland, for more than twenty miles up and down the river: located in a genteel neighborhood, it would make an agreeable residence, and from its proximity to market, with the advantage of the best navigation, an extremely profitable farm.—The tenant's houses would accommodate the negroes for its cultivation.

A Tract, about one mile back from the former, containing 334 acres, a large portion in wood, white and red oak, and some chesnut; the remainder a tenement in tolerable repair, the whole a high stiff soil, similar to the one above mentioned.

A Tract, lying at the mouth of Mattawoman Creek, about 25 miles from Alexandria, the whole first rate flat river land, now completely enclosed.—On this tract is a noted fishery, called Rum Point, at which there has been cleared upwards of two thousand dollars per annum, and where independent of the fish sold on the shore, there might be put up from one to two thousand barrels every season; besides the profits of the fishery, the advantage of manuring the farm with the offal of the shore, the whole, with a small portion of industry, might be made to produce ten barrels of corn per acre. On the shore, are a dwelling house, houses for bolding salt, and curing any quantity of fish, and for the accommodation of hands.

A Tract, lying about 1½ miles from the last mentioned, containing 236 acres, more than 200 of which are in wood, and would cut from 25 to 30 cords per acre, within one mile of the river, where wood has rarely sold for less than five dollars per cord. It will be divided into 50 or 25 acre lots, to suit purchasers.—If preferred, the wood will be sold standing, for so much per acre.

If not disposed of, previous to the first day of Sept. next, the above mentioned arable lands, will be leased out, upon advantageous terms, for five or seven years, at the option of the lessees.

Application to be made to the subscriber, residing near the head of Mattawoman Creek, Charles county, Maryland.

A FRIEND OF THE CONSTITUTION.—NO. IV.

In his third number Hampden states those specific objections to the opinion of the supreme court, which are to justify the virulent invectives he has, so unsparingly bestowed on the judicial department.

Before noticing these objections, I must be allowed to observe that, in recapitulating what he supposes himself to have established in his preceeding numbers, he entirely misrepresents what he has himself attempted to prove.

After stating that the clause containing the words necessary and proper was "tautologous and redundant," he adds, "I have also shown that,' in that case, such means were implied, and such only, as were essential to effectuate the power; and that this is the case in all the codes of the law of nature, of nations, of war, of reason, and the common law. The means, and the only means, admitted by them all, and especially by the common law, are laid down emphatically to be such, without which, the grant cannot have its effect."

Can Hampden possibly believe that he has even attempted to show these things? Can he possibly have so far misunderstood himself? Or does he shift his ground to impose on his readers? Can he already have forgotten that all his quotations and all his arguments apply to "incidental" or "additional" powers, not to the means by which powers are to be executed? Can it have escaped his recollection that, so far from even making an effort to show that by any law whatever, it is "laid down emphatically" that those means only may be used in the execution of the power "without which the grant cannot have its effect," he has proscribed the term itself, as one "broad enough to demolish the limits prescribed to the general government by the constitution?" "As one which might cover the latent designs of ambition and change the nature of the general government?" Does he not remember, or does he suppose his readers will not remember, the motives he ascribes to the supreme court for "trumping up this equally novel, undefined, and general term?" I will not retort on Hampden the charge of "guile" on this occasion, but I cannot leave him the advantage he claims, of having proved that which he has not even suggested. I have not controverted his real proposition "that the limited grant to congress of certain enumerated powers, only carried with it such additional powers as were fairly incidental to them." But I utterly deny that when a power is granted, "those means only may be used in its execution, without which the grant cannot have its effect. I utterly deny that this proposition is maintained in any code whatever. When the attempt to establish it shall be made it will be time enough to show that it is totally unsustainable.

I now proceed to the errors ascribed by Hampden, to the opinion of the supreme court.

The first is that the court has agreed in favor of an enlarged construction of the clause authorizing congress "to make all laws necessary and proper for carrying into execution" the powers vested in the government.

Hampden does not venture to assert in express terms that the court has ascribed to that clause the quality of enlarging the powers of congress, or of enabling the legislature to do that which it might not have done had the clause been omitted. He knows well that such an assertion would have been unfounded, for he says "the supreme court itself admits that these terms were used & only used, to remove all doubts of the implied powers of the national legislature in relation to the great mass of concerns entrusted to it. This is an admission by the court that they were not used for the purpose of enlargement."

Why then does he seek indirectly to impress on the minds of his readers this idea known to himself to be incorrect?

But I will advert to the particular instances of this error, which he has selected in support of his charge.

The first is that the supreme court has said that this clause "is placed among the powers of the government, and not among the limitations on those powers."

That it is so placed, is aknowledged. But the court is supposed to be highly culpable for stating this truth, because it was stated for a purpose which this writer condemns.

To demonstrate that this argument was not used for the purpose, or in the manner alleged by Hampden, it is only necessary to advert to the opinion itself.

The court has laid down the proposition that "the government which has a right to do an act, and has imposed upon it the duty of performing that act must, according to the dictates of reason, have a right to select the means." Having reasoned on this proposition, the court adds, but the constitution of the United States has not left the right of congress to employ the necessary means for the execution of the powers conferred on the government to general reasoning. To its enumeration of powers is added that of making "all laws which shall be necessary and proper."

The meaning of the court cannot be mistaken. It is that this clause expresses what the preceding reasoning shewed must be implied.

The court then proceeds, "The counsel for the state of Maryland have urged various arguments to prove that this clause, tho' in terms a grant of power, is not so in effect; but is really restrictive of the general right, which might otherwise be implied, of selecting means for executing the enumerated powers."

The court then proceeds to combat these arguments of counsel—and combats them so successfully as to draw from Hampden himself the acknowledgement that "the words prohibit nothing to the general government." "It is only contended," he says, "That they create no enlargement of the powers previously given." Yet after thus explicitly yielding the point which was really in contest, he attempts to turn this total defeat into a victory, by contending that those arguments which were urged to prove that this clause did not restrain the powers of congress were brought forward to prove that it enlarges them, and fails of doing so.

No man, I think, who will even glance at the opinion, will fall into the error into which Hampden would lead him. The court, after reasoning at some length upon the clause, says, "To waste time and argument to prove that, without it, congress might carry its powers into execution, would be not much less idle than to hold a lighted taper to the sun. As little can it be required to prove that, in the absence of this clause, congress would have some choice of means," &c. "This clause," the court adds, "as construed by the state of Maryland, would abridge, and almost annihilate this useful and necessary right of the legislature to select its means. That this could not be intended, is, we should think, had it not been already controverted, too apparent for controversy. We think so for the following reasons: The clause is placed among the powers of congress, and not among the limitations on those powers."

The court proceeds to state several other reasons, to show that the clause could not have been intended by the convention to abridge those powers which congress would otherwise have possessed, and concludes with expressing the entire conviction that it could not be construed "to impair the right of the legislature to exercise its best judgement in the selection of measures to carry into execution the constitutional powers of the government." Hampden himself refers to that part of this conclusion which assigns to the clause the office of removing all doubt respecting the right "to legislate on that vast mass of incidental powers, which must be involved in the constitution," and approves it. Yet he has mentioned this argument, "that the clause is placed among the powers of congress, and not among the limitations on those powers," as his first objection to the opinion of the court; and he objects to it, not because the statement is untrue, but because the court urged it to establish an enlarged construction, an "extension" of the powers of congress.

I appeal to any man of the most ordinary understanding, when I ask if Hampden can possibly have misunderstood the opinion of the supreme court on this point? If he has not, why has he misrepresented it?

The second reason assigned by the court to prove that this clause could not be intended to abridge the powers of congress, is, "That its terms purport to enlarge, not to diminish the powers vested in the government."

Its terms are, "Congress shall have power to make all laws which may be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers."

I ask, with much confidence, whether these words purport to be words of grant, or of limitation? If the answer must be that they are words of grant, then the court stated them correctly. Hampden cannot controvert this; but he censures the argument, because it was urged to prove an extension of the powers of government. It was not so urged. The court states it explicitly as the second reason for believing that this clause did not abridge the powers of congress; and adds "no reason has been, or can be assigned, for thus concealing an intention to narrow the discretion of the national legislature, under words which purport to enlarge it."

Why, again let me ask, why has Hampden thus plainly misrepresented the opinion he condemns?

"The supreme court," he says, "has also claimed such an enlargement, on the ground that our constitution is one of a vast republic, whose limits they have pompously swelled, and vastly exaggerated."

The supreme court has not claimed "such enlargement" on the ground stated by this very inaccurate writer, or on any other ground.

After stating truly the extent of our great republic, the court says, "The exigencies of the nation may require that the treasure raised in the north should be transported to the south, that raised in the east conveyed to the west, or that this order should be reversed. Is that construction of the constitution to be preferred which would render these operations difficult, hazardous, and expensive? &c.

I refer to this whole paragraph in the opinion; and aver that not a syllable uttered by the court, applies to an enlargement of the powers of congress. The reasoning of the judges is opposed to that restricted construction which would embarrass congress, in the execution of its acknowledged powers; and maintains that such construction, if not required by the words of the instrument, ought not to be adopted of choice; but makes no allusion to a construction enlarging the grant beyond the meaning of its ends. The charge of having "pompously swelled, and greatly exaggerated" the limits of the United States, would be too paltry for notice, were it not to remark, that, even in the most unimportant circumstances, Hampden delights to cast unmerited censure.—The court had said, "From the St. Croix to the Gulph of Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, revenue is to be collected and expended, armies are to be marched and supported." And is not the St. Croix our north-eastern boundary? Is not Louisiana bounded by the Gulph of Mexico on the south? Does not our late treaty with England establish a line between the territory of the two governments, to the Pacific? And do we not, independent of our unratified treaty with Spain, claim the mouth of the Columbia, which empties into that ocean?

"The supreme court," says Hampden, "also claimed favor in this particular, on account of the magnitude of the trust confided to the general government."

This charge, like every other, is totally unfounded. The language of the court is, "the sword and the purse, all the external relations, and no inconsiderable portion of the industry of the nation, are entrusted to its government. It can never be pretended that such vast powers draw after them others which are inferior, merely because they are inferior. Such an idea can never be advanced. But it may with great reason be contended that a government entrusted with such ample powers, on the due execution of which the happiness and prosperity of the nation so vitally depend, must also be entrusted with ample means for their execution. The power being given, it is the interest of the nation to facilitate its execution. It can never be their interest, and cannot be presumed to have been their intention, to clog and embarass its execution."

And I ask if every sentiment here advanced be not strictly true? Congress has power to raise armies. Whatever doubts Hampden may entertain of the propriety of granting this power, can he seriously contend that its execution should be so clogged and embarrassed as that the troops cannot be raised in the manner most economical and most convenient to the people? So congress has power to levy taxes, with this only limitation, that direct taxes shall be proportioned to numbers, and indirect taxes shall be uniform. Does he so construe the constitution as to impose other limitations, or to inhibit congress from raising taxes by the means least burthensome to the people?

But be this as it may, it is most obvious that the opinion does not even hint the idea ascribed to it by Hampden. So far from suggesting that an enlarged construction is to be inferred from the magnitude of the trust, it expressly rejects this inference by saying, "It can never be pretended that such vast powers draw after them others which are inferior, merely because they are inferior." The argument is plainly advanced by the court in opposition to that unnaturally restrained construction which had been pressed by the counsel for the state of Maryland; and contends only that the government should be allowed, for the execution of its powers, means co-extensive with them.

I ask if Hampden himself can deny the correctness of this reasoning? I ask if he can discern any thing in the proposition that means for the execution of powers should be proportioned to the powers themselves, which contends that those powers ought to be enlarged by construction or otherwise?

A FRIEND OF THE CONSTITUTION.

The following extract from Governor Pownall's Topographical Description of Virginia, is copied into a late number of the Enquirer, and thus meets our eyes. It exhibits strong facts to shew the facility and advantages of an exterior line of communication between the waters of the Atlantic and the rivers of the West. We should be obliged to some one of our readers for a view of the state of this route, its comparative expensiveness, &c. at the present day. The land carriage hence to Conococheague, (where now stands the town of Williamsport,) is saved by the employment of the partially improved (but yet too much neglected) navigation of the Potomac instead of more expensive and tedious transportation over land. It would be gratifying to us also to learn from some one qualified to give the information, what progress has been made in the operations of the Potomac Company, under the efficiency supposed more recently to have been imparted to it by giving a new direction. It is no wonder we should feel a little interest on this subject, when we reflect that the future commerce, and of course the future prosperity of the metropolis, is closely connected with the proper improvement of this channel of intercourse with the interior.

THE EXTRACT.

"During the late war (of 1756,) on the Ohio, most of the heavy commodities were landed from England, at Georgetown, on Potomac, sent then in waggons to Conogecheig, there embarked in canoes, and landed at Fort Cumberland—from thence to Monongahela, at the mouth of Redstone creek, and then to Pittsburgh. The distance from Cumberland to Redstone creek, is 73 miles, performed in 3 days, each wagon, with two horses, carrying 22 cwt. and allowed 9 shillings per day. It was afterwards known that a good waggon road might be made from Fort Cumberland to a branch of the Youghionesny, of not more than 40 miles. The garrison of Pittsburgh received large supplies of provisions from the S. branch of Potomac, by a waggon road through the mountains to Cheat river, 50 miles above Redstone creek, and thence they went by water to Pittsburgh. The distance from the S. branch of the Potomac is only 20 miles.

Mr John Ballemene has proved that for less than 40,000 pounds locks might be formed at the Potomac and James river falls, so that large barges might navigate both streams."

Palladium Office, Boston, June 26, noon.

Arrived, schr. General Brewer, 5 days from Eastport, with papers of that place to the 19th, St. John, to 16th inst. and Demarara to May 21st.

About 2000 emigrants, chiefly from Ireland, arrived at St. John, the 10 days previous to the 16th inst. Ship Thomas Henry, from Londonderry, had 327; brig Hannah, from do. 273; ship Hercules, do. do. 250, &c.

Capt. Howard, who arrived at St. Andrews on the 15th, in 27 days from the Island of Trinidad, informed that a few days previous to his sailing, four ships arrived in the Gulf of Paria, full of English troops bound to Augustura.

Demarara, May 5.

H. M. sloop Ontario, arrived at Barbadoes a few days since, spoke the Lisse, and was informed that the British frigate Andromache was blockaded in a port of Chili, by Lord Cochran with two 60 gun ships, she having on board six millions of dollars, Spanish property.

FROM NEW ORLEANS.

The markets and freights at New-Orleans on the 26th of May, were as follows:—MARKETS—Tobacco $9 to 11 per cwt; Sugar 9 to 10; Molasses 6 to 8. FREIGHTS—To the continent of Europe—Tobacco 1 2-3 cents per lb.; Cotton 2 3-4—To England—Tobacco 1¼ cents; Cotton, do. do. Of the first class of vessels, there were fourteen ships and brigs unchartered, and several unchartered of an inferior class.—Freights were on the rise.

One of the last mails brought us the first number of the Missouri Intelligencer and Boon's Lick Advertiser. It contains numerous advertisements, the evidence of increasing population. What think you, reader, of a newspaper at Boon's Lick in the wilds of Missouri, in 1819; where in 1809 there was not, we believe, a civilized being, excepting the eccentric character, who gave his name to the spot—who delighted in the dreary and awful solitude by which he was surrounded—and who has since travelled further into the wilderness, to avoid society, and enjoy his favorite life of a hunter. The editor of this paper has been thought extravagant for having asserted in a private circle, his belief, that in less than a century we should in all probability have a turnpike route from Albany to the shores of the Pacific! But such a consummation is not less to be expected, than it was to have been expected twenty years ago, that we should now see, on the wild and distant theatre of Boon's hunting exploits, a printing press diffusing intelligence weekly among a numerous population! And now, we repeat, that Henry Homespun, jr. is no prophet, for the second rising generation from the present will march straight forward on a smooth road, and through flourishing settlements, from Albany to the Columbia river! The Yellow Stone expedition is already a grand link in this chain of communication. What a vast theatre of the rise, decline and fall of human greatness!

THE GERMAN INTELLIGENCER.

The circumstances connected with Sand, the assassin of Kotzebue, are strictly investigated, and copies of the minutes are placed into the hands of the Russian Envoy. The result of the investigation is not made public, and no reports are therefore to be received implicitly. The attendants of Sand, the Physician, the Clergyman, Judge, &c. have been required to swear that they will not divulge any thing concerning this infatuated young man. They are prohibited from making known what he speaks, and how he is; they are not even allowed to say whether he is dead or alive.

A letter from Petersburgh states that commerce has declined very much. The prices of grain in Russian ports have fallen considerably, and there is little demand for Russian commodities.

The Archbishop of Warsaw and Primas of Poland, Herr Von Malczewski, died on the 18th April, in the 65th year of his age.

On the 6th of May, the corner stone of a new Church was laid at the Hamburger-Berg, in the precincts of Hamburgh.

The States of Baden were opened in a solemn manner, on the 22d April. The Grand Duke delivered a very impressive address on the occasion, after which the representatives of the States were sworn into office. The required oath obligates them to aid and promote according to their best judgment, the public welfare, without regard to peculiar ranks or classes. A letter from Carlsruhe, giving a detailed account of the proceedings on the occasion says: thank God, we Germans begin a public life, we commence to speak publicly, and personally to step forth for the general weal. And in this also, our princes are desirous to give the noblest examples. In his speech the Grand Duke said among other things: Sacred be to us the Spirit, as well as the letter of the Constitution; in her boundaries we can, and we, will seek, and for ever establish the welfare of our native country. I shall administer justice and order with vigor, and conscientiously fulfil the constitution to the utmost; on this I here give you my sacred princely word.

A tragical event occurred lately at Keipzig—a student asked for the consent of the parents of his beloved—the parents would not permit the contemplated marriage; the lovers despair, and resolve to drown themselves together. They go to the river; the girl plunges into the water first, and suddenly the student is attacked with hydrophobia. He returns home in order to shoot himself, but he fears the loud noise of the explosion. He places a viol with poison before him, but he has some griping apprehensions; he is discovered in this dilemma, and saved from destruction; the poor girl however is dead.

The legislature of Massachusetts have passed an act regulating damages upon inland bills of exchange—upon all such bills payable within the states of New-Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Connecticut, or N. York, 3 per cent. on the amount of such bills—if payable within the states of New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, or District of Columbia, 5 per cent. If payable within the states of North Carolina, South Carolina, or Georgia, 6 per cent: If payable within any other of the United States, or the territories thereof, 9 per cent.

THE BUTTERFLY IN CHURCH.

Last Sunday afternoon a butterfly appeared in the church. Borne on the wind, the variegated stranger fluttered in, and immediately attracted the attention of half the congregation. The younger auditors watched every motion—the older looked occasionally at the insect, and even the gravest cast an enquiring glance on the beautiful stranger, as it wandered about without any apparent object now hovering over the flowers of a bonnet, and now waited toward the roses on some beauty's cheek. After a few vagaries of this kind, the butterfly went out, as it came in, through a window.

This little creature is a striking emblem of a belle at church. Just like our butterfly the airy Melissa enters the house without a thought on the object of the assembly, without a care except to see and be seen. She too is the subject of universal notice, as she glides gracefully to her pew. Nor is she a whit more still, solemn or engaged in the business of the place.—This lady's bonnet, that lady's shawl, and yonder gentleman's wealth, talents, or looks catch her thoughts by turns for a moment, as her eye rambles over the congregation, and her fan often emulates the restlessness of the butterfly's wing. The hour past, she flits away in like manner, the gaze of all the fops, the pity of all the wise, and the envy of all the weak girls among the audience. Such is the beautiful, lively, accomplished, thoughtless Melissa, whom I shall never see again on Sunday, without thinking of the butterfly in church.

LITERARY NOTICE

A new work has been published by C. S. Van Winkle, at New-York, entitled "The Sketch Book of Geoffrey Crayton, gent. No 1."—This is a new production said to be from the elegant & racy pen of Washington Irving, Esq. This first number contains five distinct sketches, viz: a sketch of Mr. Crayton; a sketch of a sea voyage; a sketch of Roscoe, the historian; a sketch of a wife; a sketch of low life in an inland Low Dutch village, as it appeared some sixty or eighty years ago, and which is thrown into the form of a story, entitled Rip Van Winkle. The graces of style; the rich, warm tone of benevolent feeling; the freely-flowing vein of hearty and happy humor, and the fine-eyed spirit of observation, sustained by an enlightened understanding, and regulated by a preception of fitness—a tact—wonderfully quick and sure, for which Mr. Irving has been heretofore so much distinguished, are all exhibited anew in the Sketch Book, with freshened beauty, and added charms.

JOHN HOPKINS

Hill and Dale, April 20.

Gunston for Sale.

THIS elegant estate is situated on the Potomac, 16 miles below Alexandria—it is bounded on three sides by the Potomac and Pohick creek, and contains nearly 3,000 acres of land, level and fertile, to which are attached six shad and herring fisheries, two of which command the river channel. This land will be laid off in four tracts, so as to have one or more fisheries to each; these tracts will be again divided if requisite. This estate is level and beautifully situated, very fertile, and remarkably healthy. Plaister acts with an effect equal to that of any part of Virginia or Pennsylvania.—I have used 500 bushels in twelve months, and such is its beneficial operation, that were I to keep this land I should considerably increase the quantity. A manufacturing mill is distant about two miles, on a stream navigable for vessels carrying 1200 bushels of wheat, where the Baltimore and Dist. of Columbia prices are given for grain: being bounded on 3 sides by water, a small extent only of fence is necessary to inclose the whole: it would be admirably adapted to grazing. The improvements are a large and very substantial brick mansion, 40 by 70 feet, with every necessary outhouse, three commodious barns, houses for Negroes, and fish houses at each of the fisheries. 120,000 bricks and 1000 bushels of lime are just burnt on the premises. There is a considerable extent of live fence, both useful and ornamental, two orchards of well selected apples and peach, besides an abundance of other choice fruit. More than 150 acres are in clover, 200 in corn, and land is in preparation for sowing 250 bushels of small grain. Any quantity of hay can be cut from the low grounds, some of which (and all might,) have been reclaimed at a trifling expense. The river and creeks, abound with wild fowl, particularly canvass backs, the woods with deer and a variety of other game. Mules, cattle, highly improved sheep, farming utensels and household furniture can be had. The terms of sale will be accommodating. Property in any of the cities, negroes, bank stock, western lands, or lands near the Ridge, will be taken in payment.—Letters must be addressed to me at Pohick Church, Fairfax county, Virginia

S. Drew, Merchant Tailor,

Removed from Fairfax-street to the corner of King and Columbus streets, and his prices falling

RESPECTFULLY acquaints his customers and the citizens in general that he has removed as above, where he will study to give satisfaction. He has by him a small but well assorted stock of goods, which will be found on inspection to be of the best quality, the whole of which he wishes to sell low for cash, and as further inducements to purchasers he offers to cut out any goods, bought of him to any size or pattern gratis.

S. Drew aware, of the advantage a ready money business has over one where long credit is given, thinks that a distinction ought to be made in the prices in each case: and as the price of provisions are low at present, he is glad to be able to announce to those customers who will feel disposed to pay him ready money for his work, that he will reduce the price of making to them according to the present journeymen's wages; and to prevent any supposed imposition on the one hand or disatisfaction on the other he is willing to be goverued by the printed regulations of prices by which the journeymen are paid in Alexandria.

N. B. Bread, flour, beef, groceries, liquors or any thing valuable taken in exchange for clothes.

S. Drew has this day opened a tavern in the same house, where he has laid in a a supply of Philadelphia and the district porter and ale, together with liquors of the best quality, and he feels confident that he shall be able to give satisfaction to all who will please to favor him with a call.—He is fitting up his house for the accommodation of boarders, travellers. &c. and from its central situation, good beds and stabling, together with other requisites, he presumes that it will be found a convenient establishment. may 25

PROSPECTUS

Of a new periodical work to be published in the city of Washington, entitled the

Washington Theological REPERTORY.

EDITORS. { Rev. Wm Hawley, Washington,
Rev. Wm. H. Wilmer, Alexandria,
Rev. Oliver Norris, Alexandria,
Rev. Reuel Keith, Georgetown.

Assisted by several other literary gentlemen of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

IF any apology were necessary for this undertaking, it may be found in the fact, that there is no publication on a similar plan, in all that section of our country lying south of New-York, and but one in the whole of the United States. It has been matter of equal surprize and regret, that the Episcopal Church should be so far behind other Christian denominations, in similar efforts to disseminate the principles of religion and piety. At a period like the present, when the Lord is preparing his way on earth, by the most remarkable efforts of human agency, and the most wonderful operations of his providence and grace—when we perceive in every part of Christendom, a praise-worthy emulation to share in the glorious work of filling the earth with the knowledge of the only true God, and his Son Jesus Christ; it would seem criminal for any to withhold their exertions, however feeble, in the great enterprize of human happiness and salvation. The editors have, therefore, felt it their duty to make this humble effort to supply this acknowledged deficiency on the part of the church in this section of the country, and to bear their share in the common exertions of Christians to promote the Redeemer's Kingdom. And having obtained the services of a gentleman, in whose talents and principles they have confidence, whose time will be wholly devoted to the superintendence of the work, they feel encouraged to solicit the patronage of the public.

The publecation will be conducted under the immediate inspection and control of the above named editors, who will form a committee to review every article intended for publication. The principles upon which it will be conducted are those of the bible, as illustrated in the articles, Liturgy and Homilies of the Protestant Episcopal Church. As members of this church the editors will feel bound to support the Apostolical character of her institutions, the pious tendency of her rites and ceremonies, and the evangelical nature of her doctrines. But in these, and all other discussions, they hope never to loose sight of that great law of charity which teaches us to "preserve the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace."

Acting upon those catholic principles, so long and so successively pursued by "The Christian Observer," their chief object will be to inculcate sound theological knowledge, and to delineate and recommend pure and vital religion. They trust therefore, that while the members of every Christian denomination may find something edifying and instructive, none will discover any just cause for offence in the pages of this work. General subjects of biblical criticism, practical illustrations of scriptural truth, the biography of illustrious persons, evidences of the truth of revelation, essays on the history and polity of the church, reviews of interesting publications, religious, literary and philosophical intelligence—in short, whatever is connected with the promotion of religion, humanity and literature, will find a place in this repository.

The testimony of experience supersedes the necessity of dwelling on the advantages of a periodical publication on the plan proposed. Its obvious tendency will be to render the various departments of religious knowledge more easy and accessible, and give a more ready currency and wider circulation, to those great truths which involve the present welfare and future destiny of man.

It will tend powerfully to stimulate the exertions of the editors, and console them under the difficulties attendant on the prosecution of this work, amidst many other avocations, should it prove the means under the blessing of God, of enriching any of its readers with the saving knowledge of Christ, and prepare them for a participation in the felicity and glory of his heavenly kingdom. With this hope they commit it into his hands, and confidently solicit their brethren of the clergy and laity to assist them in carrying into effect the objects of the undertaking.

TERMS OF THE WORK.

A volume of the Repertory shall consist of twelve numbers, of which one shall be published on the first day of every month, containing thirty-two large octavo pages, stitched in blue, and attended with a table of contents.

The paper used in the work shall be good, and the typography executed with the greatest care.

The price of a volume is two dollars, payable in advance; to such as omit the advance, two dollars and fifty cents.

It is designed to enlarge the size of the work, without increasing the price, as soon as one thousand subscribers shall be obtained.

Communications and remittances may be directed to any of the editors, post paid.

Any person becoming responsible for five subscribers, shall receive a sixth copy gratis.

The first number may be expected in the month of July. June 26
